

New Financing Option Available to Students at the Denver Health School of Medical Laboratory Science

Students enrolled in the Denver Health School of Medical Laboratory Science who need tuition or financial assistance will now have access to an innovative new financing option to pay for their courses, thanks to our partnership with the Meritize platform.

The new financing option will help MLS students finance their careers in Medical Laboratory Science.

Unlike traditional lenders that rely solely on FICO scores, and other financial records to determine whether to lend to an individual, the Meritize platform considers the full depth of an individual's academic or military achievements to enhance credit evaluation and potentially improve loan options.

Because the new financing option considers previous academic or military experiences, merit-based financing may provide a significant source of financial and credit assistance for students who are self-financing their education to become a Medical Laboratory Scientist.

Contact Joan Polancic at joan.polancic@dhha.org for more information about this financing option.
