

HOUSING CONNECTIONS

People without stable housing often experience fragmented care that is inefficient, expensive and poorly coordinated across multiple healthcare and social service providers and have worse health outcomes across a range of health indicators.

Current State: Summer 2022

To provide the best possible care for all our patients, Denver Health is working proactively to address identified gaps in care by facilitating connections to housing and other critical supports in collaboration with many other local organizations and partners, including:

- Colorado Coalition for the Homeless
To improve care coordination and provide a safe place for patients to recover following hospitalization
- Denver Housing Authority and Corporation for Supportive Housing
To design a 14-unit transitional housing program for older and disabled patients
- Colorado Village Collaborative
To provide a safe outdoor space for 50 unsheltered individuals
- The Denver Joint Task Force
To mitigate the impact of COVID-19 and emerging health threats on Denver's unhoused communities
- Social Impact Partnership Pay for Performance Results Act (SIPPRA) Housing to Health program partners
To connect eligible patients with permanent supportive housing

Future State: Goals 2022-2023

GOOD DATA -

Implement an integrated data tools and systems and tools to identify patients experiencing homelessness and track outcomes.

GOOD TEAM -

Create a Housing Support Solutions Team with program and data support to coordinate align efforts internal and external to Denver Health.

GOOD NETWORK -

Be a part of the network of community organizations that serves people experiencing homelessness to better provide seamless support to achieve health and wellbeing.

Denver Health can't solve homelessness, but we can bring together a team to support patients experiencing homelessness through a Continuum of Care model to address the complex needs that extend outside of Denver Health, meaningful connections to housing and other supports through our partnerships.
